Lefki Beach

About

Lefki lies on the northern coast of the Perachora peninsula. Its name comes from the pale pebbles which, together with the transparent water, give the sea an intense blue-green colour.

What to expect

An unorganised beach with few visitors even in high summer. Pines and low scrub surround it, and the final approach is on a dirt track.

It is the choice for anyone who wants to avoid crowds entirely and does not mind carrying everything in.

Practical notes

- Reached across the Perachora peninsula; the last stretch is unpaved.
- No facilities at all — water, food and shade are essential.
- Best in calm weather.

Useful information

Best time to visit	April–June & September–October (mild, uncrowded)
